A new day
DEAR FRIENDS,

Over the last 25 years, I have faithfully served Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Greensburg as its managing director. I was appointed to this position June 21, 1995, by Bishop Anthony Bosco. Each and every day I am truly humbled by this amazing opportunity. Through our entire 66-year history, countless lives have been touched by the work which is being done by our staff and volunteers in the name of Our Lord.

Much has changed in the communities served by our diocese since I began leading this wonderful organization. Over the years, we have evolved in many ways in response to the needs of the needy of our diocese. At this point in time, as we look forward, once again, I see “a new day” for Catholic Charities, which is the theme for this year’s annual report. As the world changes, we must look at our work differently, adjusting to the pressing needs of the people we serve and working with other volunteer organizations and our parishes to broaden the considerable efforts being made to serve and aid those at risk.

In this report I want to especially call your attention to the good work being done to help both the old and the young. Our good and faithful staff work with the elderly throughout the Diocese of Greensburg and focus on their mental health and well-being. Our tireless volunteers help to stock a baby closet with food, clothing and supplies for families struggling to make ends meet with infants in tow. Over the years, I have continually felt the presence of the Holy Spirit as I have seen the fruit of our very successful Catholic Charities Christmas Program. Each year, donations pour into our office from parishes across the diocese, providing gifts of joy for families in need.

When the year comes to an end and we assess the impact we’ve made, we quickly realize that we cannot rest for long. There are so many in need!

The Book of Lamentations says, “The steadfast love of the Lord never ceases; his mercies never come to an end; they are new every morning; great is your faithfulness” (Lam 3:22-23).

To all of you who support Catholic Charities, thank you for being steadfast in your love of the work we do. Please continue to pray for us in the many new days ahead.

Blessings,

The Rev. Msgr. Raymond E. Riffle, M.S.W., M.P.A.

NEW CHALLENGES

MATERIAL ASSISTANCE

Mary is a single parent of two sons, 13 and 10, and they have lived in Westmoreland County for the past three years.

Mary, who was working as a secretary, suffered a debilitating injury in a car accident and was unable to work. She started receiving disability benefits, but she is currently in a wheelchair.

Because of her physical limitations, Mary found it increasingly difficult to live in her two-story home. She contacted Catholic Charities to ask about rental assistance so the family could move into a first-floor apartment, which would allow her to be more mobile.

Last year, Mary asked Catholic Charities for help with a security deposit for the new apartment. A Catholic Charities information and referral caseworker helped her connect with the Westmoreland County Housing Authority, and she was screened for rental help through the Bethlehem Project, a collaborative program of Blessed Sacrament Cathedral Parish, Greensburg, and Catholic Charities that offers rental assistance to people in need. With help from WCHA and the Bethlehem Project, Mary was able to pay her security deposit and first month’s rent. She also received help from Catholic Charities to pay a deposit to start water service.

Mary said Catholic Charities’ help allowed her to become more self-sufficient.

As an outpatient therapist with Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Greensburg, Kimberly H. Landa describes her current duties as “the most rewarding work I’ve ever done.”

Landa’s work is part of Catholic Charities’ partnership with the United Way program, Open Your Heart to a Senior (formerly Faith in Action). She visits with seniors in their homes to provide behavioral health services, filling a growing need across Armstrong, Fayette, Indiana and Westmoreland counties. “The need is so great,” Landa, a licensed clinical social worker, says. “Our population is shifting, and I believe it will be mostly seniors in the next 20-30 years.”

Landa works with clients in Westmoreland County to provide emotional support, with special attention to challenges unique to seniors such as losing a spouse after decades of marriage. She travels to their homes because most of her clients have vision loss or other impairments that prevent them from driving — a challenge that can also contribute to their isolation and need for support. “It is a very rewarding experience to work with my clients because they have a special sense of wisdom and gratitude,” Landa said. “They also are people of faith, so I am able to use my faith as part of what I do.”

While many visits do focus on hardships like grief and loss, others call for simple fellowship and prayer. “Sometimes I just sit down with these wonderful people and listen to their interesting life stories, like about using trolleys in the 1940s and 1950s… and laugh together about funny things and stories, past and present,” Landa said. “Sometimes we are quiet together and pray when silence is needed.”

Open Your Heart to a Senior needs volunteers for friendly visits, appointment escort, handy person/ minor repairs, telephone reassurance, caregiver relief, errands and shopping, referral assistance, and yardwork and gardening.

NEW EXPERIENCES

“Christmas should not end for them”

PROVIDING GIFTS FOR NEEDY TEENS

Months before the snow falls and the lights begin to glisten, a dedicated handful of volunteers with Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Greensburg are already working to make Christmas magical for a group that can be easily overlooked: teenagers in need.

The annual Christmas Program identifies families who have required assistance throughout the year and focuses on those with children ages 13-18 — children who otherwise might not receive gifts. Last year, the program served 225 teens.

For more than 12 years, current volunteer coordinator Jane Szczygiel has been part of this effort. She calls the program a “labor of love” and says it fills a critical need.

“There are so many other programs in the community doing wonderful things, like Toys for Tots, but those are focused on younger children and many end at age 12,” she says. “We don’t feel Christmas should end for these older children just because their families can’t afford it. They are still in school, and everybody wants to go back to school wearing something new and be able to talk about their gifts. In the teen years, especially, they are very sensitive to fitting in with peers.”

Throughout the year, Catholic Charities caseworkers identify families who would be eligible for the program and notify Szczygiel and her fellow volunteers. The group then secretly works with the teens’ parents to make wish lists for each one — items like clothes, perfumes or colognes, and accessories rather than electronics, games or music — and matches them with sponsors.

Sponsors are volunteers with organizations that partner with Catholic Charities for the Christmas Program each year, including local parishes, schools, colleges, corporations and individuals. They receive the wish lists just after Halloween and drop off their donated gifts to Catholic Charities just after Thanksgiving.

“The gifts are always so generous,” Szczygiel said. “It looks like the North Pole here when they start coming in.”

Over the next month, the team of seven to eight volunteers spend nearly 100 hours screening and wrapping the gifts and arranging pickup with the teens’ parents — all with the goal of the teens never even knowing their presents came from anyone but their families.

“It’s a lot of work, but it’s so much fun,” Szczygiel says. “Everyone wants to do good, and we are especially lucky because our volunteers are so generous with their time.”

The Christmas Program grows steadily each year, she says, with new sponsors joining in and longtime sponsors increasing their donations and, therefore, more teens being served. But the need remains great.

“Right now, we probably serve only about a third of the families who would be eligible for the program,” Szczygiel said. “The needy will always be with us, and it’s a wonderful time of year to be able to help like this.”

*Department closed in fall 2019
A pattern started to emerge inside the walls of the counseling center at Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Greensburg.

Couples were seeking marriage counseling but, in numerous cases, staff discovered another problem — uncontrolled anger, especially among the men.

That was in 1994, when Bob Brinker was an intern. With the help of priests and full-time staff, he secured a six-month grant to launch an anger management program that would address the root of behavior that was destroying these men’s relationships.

“My approach has always been nonjudgmental and seeks to connect with these men and get down their defenses,” Brinker said. “Most of them have a lot of hurt and pain.”

A group of four men doubled in size by the end of the six-month grant. It was so effective that the men asked to continue meeting. Soon the local court system became aware of the group’s positive results, and judges, attorneys and other officials began requiring certain offenders to attend.

Twenty-five years later, men still gather weekly with Brinker at the helm. Although members can join only through referral and a screening process, it can still swell up to 25 people at a time. Now with his master’s degree in counseling, Brinker says the anger many of these men exhibit is a result of the world around them.

“We are taught anger in many of our films, video games and often in our own families,” Brinker said. “How we express anger has been modeled and taught to us. But we are all capable of change and learning a better way.”

The group focuses on exploring the root of each man’s anger, as well as discovering healthy ways to deal with rage, stress and channeling emotions, all while firmly holding each person accountable, he said.

The program results in a breakthrough feeling for many of the men, according to Brinker — a feeling quite different than the anger they carried through the door.

“They finally experience a sense of trust,” he said.
